

Haven't we all found ourselves in situations and circumstances where we just don't make a connection or we feel out of place? Maybe it's at work or in a social group or maybe it's just with one individual. So how do you survive when you feel as though you don't fit in? How do you navigate the perils of just being yourself when you feel like the square peg in the round hole of life? After many years of working for Fortune 100 companies, trade associations, government entities and casinos and being self-employed, Pat Getter has compiled maxims in "Fitting In" to help you find your way through workplace and life's other pitfalls while maintaining your inner strength and without losing your identity. They include keep your eye on the prize, we're all replaceable, deadwood doesn't float and three can keep a secret. At the end of a very long career or just a string of many unfulfilling jobs, will you be able to look at yourself and be satisfied that you still have your self-worth? Finesse and leverage your individualism without compromising or sacrificing your integrity so you can succeed even when you feel like that square peg. You may be pummeled along the way but you will persevere and overcome the obstacles put before you if you believe in who you are.
