

Whether you're growing in a greenhouse, in a GrowLab Indoor Light Garden, or on a windowsill, Activities for Growing Minds will help spark students' curiosity about plants and invite them to think and act like scientists. Developed by the National Gardening Association and written and field-tested by educators, this resource uses fun, illustrated activities that can be added to your curriculum to teach and explore plant life cycles, examine plant diversity, and investigate the interdependence of plants, humans, and other living and nonliving things. It's a must for any plant-based studies! Enhance instruction and student learning in your classroom today. This hands-on activity book meets National Science Standards; 307 pages; grades K-8.
