

Excerpt from Lessons of Faith and Life: Discourses This volume hardly requires a preface. It consists of a few discourses selected from many that I have preached in this city during my ministry here of almost thirty years. They have been copied for the press from manuscripts in which some of the passages were fully written out, while in other instances I have endeavored to recover the substance of my remarks from fragmentary notes. These discourses have been arranged without regard to the relation of subjects. I need not add that they probably contain nothing new; but I hope they may be found to express needed although familiar truth. They are simply what they profess to be, - Lessons of Faith and Life. They are now committed to those, who, having heard them, may desire to receive them again in this form, and to any who may think fit to read them; and I pray that God will make them useful.
