

L'Orlando furioso, poema cavalleresco in ottave, composto da quarantasei canti, ha una intelaiatura anche encomiastica perché l'opera non può prescindere dal rapporto con la società per la quale l'Ariosto scrive e crea una sua misura artistica di contenuti e di stile, operando una continua relazione ideologica ed estetica. Buon critico di sé, scrivendo al Doge, nel 1515, dell'opera «in la quale si tratta di cose piacevoli et delectabili de armi et amori», attribuiva il carattere piacevole del poema al fatto che anche l'ispirazione delle parti favolose derivava da problemi e situazioni patrimonio comune dell'esperienza di quella società, e che nel complessivo significato il Furioso esprimeva sentimenti storici e problemi presenti ai contemporanei (Antonio Piromalli)
