

A helpful guide for any student who is preparing for college. A book of encouragement for parents who wonder if their student is on the right track. Inspiration for language learners to download for personal reference. Friends, Family, Do them a favor – send them this Gift E-book now! In times of economic uncertainty, the best investment you can make is in your education. Master a foreign language in high school and then take a standardized test to exempt out of the required twelve basic credits of language study at the college level. This book will clarify the process for you and give you hope that yes, you too can save thousands of dollars in college tuition costs. Reasonably priced to fit your budget in these challenging times. A welcome pep talk for any language learner by a lifelong student of foreign languages, Cheryl Elaine Williams, BA Russian Penn State, teaching accreditation through the University of Pittsburgh, accredited by the State of PA to teach Russian at the elementary school level through high school. Minor field of concentration: Spanish language. Studied French from third grade through twelfth grade. Also studied Persian and German. Twenty-five years of federal service, retired at age 51 and now a freelance writer. After you take your placement test(s), you want to be one of those who can proudly state, “I exempted out of college Spanish (or French, German, Latin, etc.) and didn’t have to take any more language study in college. I saved a lot of money in tuition and got to move on to the good courses, those I really wanted to take. I got past the required courses and jumped right into my major field of study, where the courses were taught by real professors, not just grad assistants.” Students, please allow me to guide you in this process where you too might save time and money that is better spent elsewhere.
