Steve Jobs Death Motivation Secrets Note: This eBook was written several months before Steve Jobs died. What keeps you awake at night? What makes you eager to salute the dawn and look forward to the sunrise? What motivates you? What fears propel you towards great achievement? For Steve Jobs, the answer to all of the above questions is DEATH. Death is Steve Jobs's prime motivator. It is the "propulsion system" that has given him the creativity and energy to imagine objects that never were and make them real not just for himself but to the world at large. Steve Jobs specifically said, "When I was 17, I read a quote that went something like: If you live each day as if it was your last, someday you'll most certainly be right. It made an impression on me, and since then, for the past 33 years, I have looked in the mirror every morning and asked myself: If today were the last day of my life, would I want to do what I am about to do today? And whenever the answer has been No for too many days in a row, I know I need to change something. Remembering that I'll be dead soon is the most important tool I've ever encountered to help me make the big choices in life." Most of us fear death. Steve Jobs fears death too but he has taken it a step further. He has actually found a way to harness it as a source of motivation. More importantly, he has learned how to utilize it as a tool "a tool for great achievement! In this e-pamphlet (which should take you less than 10 minutes to read), you will learn how to embrace a paradigm that will empower you to stare death in the face and make it the source of your inner drive to achieve more, to live each day as if it were you last and to never take anything "or anyone" in your life for granted!
